

Engineering Geology (14)

- Energy resources development involves engineering work at, in the ground
- Conventional mining methods requires engineering properties of ground, such as rock mass strength, joint density etc

- Geothermal energy project also requires engineering properties of rock and soil including thermal properties of minerals, porosity and permeability